How Remote Learning is Working for Children and Young People with SEND

Ofsted have published findings on good practice for remote learning for children and young people with SEND based on their visits to schools during the autumn and spring terms.

This is in acknowledgement of the concerns that many families have raised in respect to how inclusive remote education has been for their children.

A recent survey found 59% of parents of a pupil with SEND said that their child has been disengaged with remote learning compared to 39% of parents of children without any additional needs.

The findings are published both as video and slide pack for school leaders with a focus on ensuring that going forward, all children with SEND are able to meaningfully engage with and benefit from remote education. The lessons learnt can also inform future planning for children and young people with SEND.

A key message from these findings was that effective communication with families is crucial. In many schools relationships with families had strengthened, with the knowledge and practical help provided by schools having a positive impact on engagement and learning.

Other key messages included:

- remote education does not mean it is delivered digitally through online lessons – it can be delivered using digital and non-digital. A blended approach with practical and paper-based work packs is helpful for children and young people with SEND
- for many children and young people with SEND the flexibility offered by remote learning was really helpful, for example some children and young people with SEND have been accessing pre-recorded lessons or work packs. This has allowed them to learn at their own pace and in some cases revisit the learning
- working with support staff: Support staff (teaching assistants have played a crucially important role in maintaining ongoing communication with families; they provided a point of contact through email, phone calls or instant messages.
- schools have found 1:1 conversations with CYP and parent or carer a useful tool for assessing progress

Capacity of parents and carers to support learning activities has a significant impact on remote education for children and young people with SEND, especially those with more significant and complex needs.

Creating structure and routine in remote education approaches are important for children and young people with SEND.

Asynchronous approaches give children and young people with SEND the opportunity to work at their own pace and 'revisit' curriculum content.

Update on SEN Transport

We are pleased to confirm that we have been able to offer COVID19 vaccinations to all of our drivers and guides, this includes those working for our in house service and our external providers too. Twice weekly lateral flow testing has also been made available to all transport staff. We also continue to work closely with Public Health England to ensure that the correct guidelines are implemented on transport. As previously advised and in line with Government guidance, whilst we take all steps possible to reduce the risk of transmission of COVID19, in most cases it is not possible to implement social distancing on vehicles transporting children to and from school. We continue to encourage the uptake of personal transport budgets to allow families to make their own safe travel arrangements.

Update from the SEN Team

The 12-25 SEN team is busy securing and confirming placements for the current Year 11 cohort in readiness for their transition to college in September. Next term, parents of children currently in Year 10 (and those in older years due to leave school) will receive a letter to seek further educational preferences for September 2022. This may seem early, but this is to initiate thoughts and discussion about what is on offer and what might be suitable. The deadline to provide preferences is not until October 2021 but it is important that families start considering this now so they are informed to make a decision when the time comes. Children will receive guidance within school on career choices and the educational route to achieve their chosen pathway.

There should be a detailed conversation about this at the EHCP review meeting so please have a think about what questions you may like to ask at that meeting. Information about further educational options is available at: <https://youngcroydon.org.uk/post-16-prospectus/>.

Many colleges are offering virtual tours so please check out their websites for more information. Once you receive your letter, please make contact with your child's EHCP coordinator if you would like more information or if you have any questions.

Admission for Specialist Provision for Reception 2021

If your nursery or other professional has submitted an application to the Local Authority for consideration for a place in one of the specialist provisions in the borough, it is important that you accept your mainstream school offer until you hear from the Local Authority that your child has secured a place in a specialist provision. As places are limited, offers will be made based on the level of need. The majority of children with additional needs are able to access mainstream provision with support. If you have any questions please speak to your child's nursery or professional who has submitted the application.

Return to School

Now children are returning to full time schooling it is a good time to review your own self-care as well as supporting your child.

Self-care for Parents

During a crisis we can move into a flight or fight mode, and become stressed, anxious and worried. As time goes on there can be frustrations or increase in low mood. It's also natural that children and young people will be having higher levels of worry, low mood and challenging behaviour during this time.

If you feel stressed at the moment, remember that is a normal response.

Having compassion for yourself and your own worries is likely to help you to support young people with their worries such as returning to school.

When we feel stressed and anxious we can use coping strategies to help us get through. These could include:-

- exercise/going for a walk
- counting to ten/leaving the room
- making time in the day to do things that are important to you
- sticking to a routine – normal eating and sleeping

Supporting your Child

There are things that you can do to help your child to face challenges. Think with your child or young person what helpful coping strategies they could use. Helpful questions include,

- what has helped in the past when you've felt worried?
- shall we google what other people have done?
- what helps you feel less stressed?

It's good to talk about worries and listen to a child's concerns. Try making time and space regularly for your children to talk to you. This can encourage and help your child to:

- develop resilience

- think positively
- ask for help when they need it
- feel like they belong
- find things that help them feel calm
- learn from mistakes
- become better at problem-solving

Try some problem solving together:

- write your problem down.
- brainstorm solutions.
- think about the upsides of the solutions and downsides. Break the problem down into manageable steps.

Helping your child to process their experiences can be helpful in preparing them to return to school. You might ask them for example, what has been different about not being in school and when they return and what will be the same.

More Help

Some children and young people may already be experiencing anxiety difficulties, which may be heightened when returning to school. If you are concerned about a child or because their anxiety is persistent and getting in the way of life (e.g., sleep, going to school, friendships or family life), they might need some more help:

- your GP will be able to offer advice
- if your school has a counselling service or MHST ask for a referral, alternatively ask your school or GP to refer to the CWP Service (Child Wellbeing Practitioner Service) through the Single Point of Access (SPOC) who can help with low mood, anxiety or challenging behaviour.
- Croydon Drop In and Off the Record are Croydon based counselling services.
- talk to your school
- helplines and apps. There are a number of helplines and apps which are helpful for anxiety, low mood and stress.

From 1 April 2021 Parents in Partnership will be joining with Croydon Mencap.

For a number of years PiP has been reliant on securing funding from a variety of sources. This has become more difficult each year and in the current economic climate it has become almost impossible for a small charity like PiP to achieve financial security.

Croydon Mencap is a well-established and respected Croydon charity, providing for the needs of adults with a learning disability, children with additional needs, and their families.

Joining the 2 charities provides greater security for PiP staff and enhances and expands the range of support Croydon Mencap is able to provide.

PiP staff will provide their services from the Croydon Mencap offices in Thornton Heath as 'PiP @ Croydon Mencap'. They will continue to support parents and carers of children and young people aged 0-25 with any kind of additional need and/or disability.

The PiP website, telephone numbers and email will continue to operate after 1st April, and once changed, will automatically forward to new numbers / email addresses.

The Virtual School

We wanted to make sure that you're aware of all the support and guidance as well as the resources available to you and your children through the Virtual School.

Firstly, we have our own Educational Psychologist, so consultations and support can be accessed quickly when needed. Do ask your Virtual School advisory teacher if this is something you need/are interested in.

Secondly, we run a whole range of activities weekly for children in care via E.M.P.I.R.E. These have been virtual throughout lockdown but watch this space for new events and changes to guidelines. Our "walks for wellbeing" happen regularly and have been really well received by children and young people needing some space to share company and fresh air! If you need a copy of the programme, contact us on the email below and we can share.

Thirdly, we have a whole range of online learning tools and programmes available to support your child's needs. From Lexia (for those with reading difficulties), to My Maths and Literacy Planet, as well as Flash Academy (ESOL) and KUDOS, for careers guidance. All of these can be accessed as part of your child's PPG through your Advisory teacher or at their PEP.

Finally, we're delighted to be trialling the project "Reach 2 Teach" across a number of our children. This is a ground-breaking tool for assessing inclusion and attachment for children who present with "behaviours that challenge" at home or school. A full, multi professional and carer assessment takes place and then the online system generates advice and strategies for supporting the child and meeting their needs in the school (Also suitable for home) setting. We are able to accept new children. If this sounds like something your child may benefit from then do let your advisory teacher know.

Our advisory team and all staff can be accessed by contacting Virtual.School@croydon.gov.uk. We look forward to hearing from you.
